KERMIT A. JOHNSON

1968-present

ADDIE SCARBOROUGH ..... Mt. Willing, Ala.

Entered 1919; Class Poet 1919-20-21-22-23; Class Cheer Leader 1921-22-23; Swimming Championship 1921-22; Advertising Manager Dramatic Club 1921-22; Business Manager Dramatic Club 1921-22; Business Manager "Technala" 1921-22; Varsity Cheer Leader 1921-22-23; "M" Club; Treasurer Dramatic Club 1921-22; Editor-in-Chief "Technala" 1922-23; Treasurer Life-Saving Corps 1922-23.

Pictured to the right is a cheerleader for the class of 1923 in her "daringly short skirt."

The Montevallo Women's Life Saving Corps is now in its second year (1924). During the past year twelve Senior members and five Junior members have been added to its numbers. The motto of the Life Saving Corps is "every girl a swimmer and every swimmer a life-saver. In order to keep every member efficient, the corps meets twice a month to practice the different breaks and to review the reserve work.

These were the types of Laboratory Facilities that were used in the chemistry labs in 1941. At this time the Chemistry Department was housed in Bloch Hall.

The caption over this picture in the 1941 Montage read: "The Secretaries of the Machine Age."

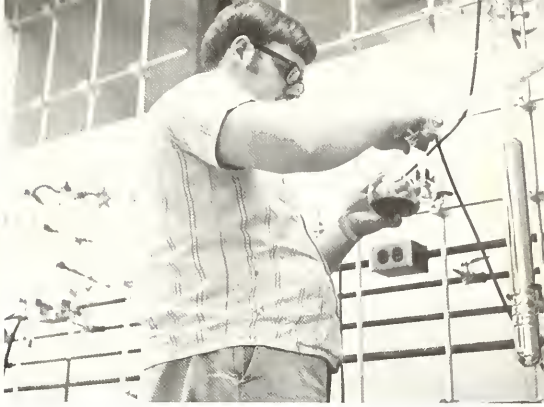
Alabama College on the air . . . in 1941.

Today the Chemistry lab work is done with the help of the most accurate scientific instruments.



The secretaries of the various departments today are affected not only by mechanical instruments, but also by the compactness of these instruments.

People have criticized the younger generation for dancing so far apart. These people must realize, though, that if young people danced any closer together, they would get the beat from the band and a beating from their partner.

Due to the fine work of Mr. Karl Perkins, we will soon have our own operative ETV station. Pictured to the left is a picture of the studio as it is nearing completion.

This is old Main Dining Hall as pictured in the 1908 yearbook of the Alabama Girls Industrial School.

Comer Hall, erected in the late 1930's was dedicated by Dr. Arthur Fort Harman, the president of the college at that time, April 25, 1940.

In 1851, The Montevallo Male Institute was organized and a brick two-story structure was built for it by a joint stock company. This school ran into financial difficulty and was forced to close in 1858. It was replaced by the Montevallo Male and Female Collegiate Institute under the supervision of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. This was closed during the war, but was reopened sometime afterward as a girls' school. This same hall, now Reynolds Hall, served as the first real class building on the campus of the Alabama Girls Industrial School.

This building was the Home Management House of Alabama College until our present Home Management House was built. Also, King House served the purpose before this one.

The Library, Wills Hall, dedicated in 1923, relieved Central Mail Hall of its role as an inadequate library. This building had ample space for students to study.

Today the dining hall is much more modern and is capable of seating many more students than before.

Comer Hall, although not changing very much on the outside, has recently been remodeled and air conditioned. It now houses the English, Foreign Language, and Business Departments.

Reynolds Hall is still one of the beauties of the University of Montevallo campus. Since the picture on the previous page was taken, this building has been renovated four times.

Pictured to the right is the new Home Management House of the University of Montevallo.

The new library of the University of Montevallo provides a great study help to students with plenty of room in which to work. The library also houses the Counseling Office.

Before 1900, Main Dormitory consisted not of three seperate sections, as it is today, but only as the section known as West Main. This picture was taken in the year 1900, while Central Main was under construction. East Main was added later.

The picture to the left is one of Hanson Hall taken in the year 1941.

Bloch Hall, opened in 1915, was the first building erected on the campus for academic work. Before its completion, the school, which was established for the purpose of teaching industrial and technical subjects, held classes in Reynolds Hall, Main Hall, in temporary frame buildings, and in private homes.

Today, Tutwiler Hall is far from plain, being surrounded by beautiful trees and shrubs.

Main Dormitory is still a beautiful attraction on the University of Montevallo Campus. Visitors to our campus see this building both as they arrive and as they leave and its beauty imparts a lasting memory.

Pictured to the left is Hanson Hall, the way it looks today. Although it differs least of any of the buildings pictured, close inspection does make one notice some slight changes.

Bloch Hall no longer is the center of many science classes on campus. Since the completion of Harmon Hall, Bloch Hall has housed the Art Department and the Home Economics Department.

The 1923 Dramatics Club held various productions such as the one pictured to the left. This is a scene from the production, "What Every Woman Knows."

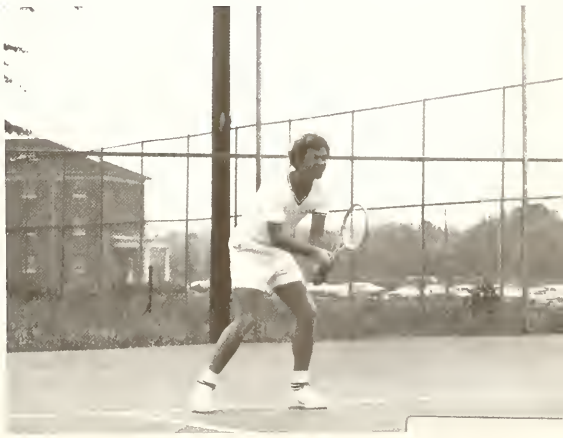
Today the Theatre Council is a much more liberal group of people. Their productions this year have been, as usual, better than those of the year before.

The Basketball team of 1970-1971 is much different than that of its ancestor, the team of 1908. The present day conditions have made the sport much more exciting.

Golf has for the most part taken over where croquet left off. Now that the campus has a golf course, it may also be the more convenient of the two.



Tennis has become one of the most popular sports on the University campus. Last year our tennis team placed first in our district and represented the 27th District at the National Championships in Kansas City.

Rules and Regulations — 1896

1. It is understood that pupils are not here to enter society, but to be educated; therefore, they are not allowed to correspond with gentlemen and visits from them are positively forbidden under penalty of expulsion.

2. Parents are requested not to encourage their daughters in coming home at Christmas, as only one day will be given for holiday, and classes and work will move on as usual. Those absenting themselves are certain to lose their standing in their classes by their absence. We have found it expensive and demoralizing for pupils to go home.

3. We cannot and will not allow pupils to go home on a visit unless there are best of reasons given. If parents cannot concur with this regulation, they are not solicited to place their daughters in this School.

4. At the closing of the School in the evening, one hour will be allowed in which pupils can make necessary purchases, but they will not be permitted to loiter in the stores unnecessarily, and must not be away from their homes after sunset.

5. The Board of Trustees selected this as the ideal spot, far removed from the contamination and corruption of our great commercial marts, for this most important institution, designated to train not only the mind and heart but also the deft fingers of the girls of Alabama.

6. Study hours begin at seven o'clock, p.m., and last until nine, p.m. At half past nine the students must retire. The rule applies to both Dormitory and private houses. The monitor is required to report any breach of table manners, and the conduct of each girl in school or out is the subject of the closest scrutiny. The arrangements of boarding girls in private families has proven very beneficial to their health.

7. The absence of a girl from her classes even for a day has a very demoralizing effect, and throws the other students behind in their studies, and is a heavy burden on the teacher. The cooperation of the parents and guardians is earnestly requested in regard to this important matter.

Rules and Regulations — 1971

A student is under University jurisdiction during the entire period of her enrollment except:
When she is signed out for an overnight absence under the chaperonage of her parents or legal guardian, either in Montevallo or out of town.
When she is signed out for an overnight out-of-town absence with parental permission (specific or standing) under the chaperonage of a responsible hostess, upon her return to Montevallo, she is again under University jurisdiction and is expected to sign in immediately.

Freshmen may have three free evenings each week: Friday and Saturday and one other of their choice. They must sign out properly and sign in by the residence hall closing hours. A student with a "B" average for the first semester may be allowed to date at her discretion but she must maintain her "B" average.

WOMEN:

The house council in each residence hall will have authority to decide the fine or punishment which will be placed upon students who do not abide by established standards for room maintenance.
The house council will be permitted, when they deem it necessary, to place upon students who do not abide by

It is expected that men students at the University of Montevallo will conduct themselves as gentlemen at all times. Any student whose language is consistently indecent and offensive, whose conduct is rude or lacking in politeness, whose dress reflects discredit upon the high traditions of the university, or who, in any other manner habitually declines to cooperate in the maintenance of a wholesome university life, may face disciplinary action.

Blanket Permission is granted to all women students unless explicitly restricted by parents.

Stars were the fragments of glasses
Shattered by the celebrating gods
On the wine-stained floors of heaven.

Of philosophers quietly smoking
In a darkened theater.

ORCHESIS

The purpose of the Orchesis Club is to give those interested in various forms of dance a means to better develop already acquired skills and to provide an opportunity to learn new forms, some of which they may not be aware. The Orchesis Club also presents an annual program in which its members, together with the moderator, organize and choreograph various dance numbers, taking into consideration such aspects as costuming, makeup, staging, lighting, sound, etc. This gives each member valuable experience which will always be of benefit to him.

Students Demand Answers

Craig Gravlee

It has been well over two months since the Alabamian first announced the passage of the now famous resolution to extend the curfew for women students. The resolution still awaits approval by the faculty committee.

Although many believe the S.G.A. is often insensitive to student desires, much of what passes for an inactive Student Government boils down to administrative unresponsiveness. This undue procrastination on the part of the faculty and administration is fooling no one. Surely these people realize that issues raised by today's student will not vanish as a result of their dilatory actions. When questions go unanswered they do not go away, but they remain and create new ones. They arise time and time again to haunt those who are foolish enough to pretend they do not exist.

Now is the time for better communications between students, faculty, and administrators because when this curfew riddle is solved it will awaken other, more crucial issues. And these questions will demand immediate consideration and unambiguous answers . . . reactions that are quite rare at Montevallo.

* * *

The student of today does not wish to destroy society's moral code by his reform. Indeed, the U.M. student is very conservative in this respect. But while the student does not wish to destroy something that belongs to someone else, he does seek the freedom to shape what is his own. The student seeks the freedom to mold his own character, and he wants to have the freedom to make his own mistakes in his endeavor.

Exciting Stage Transformation

Dr. Benjamin Middaugh not only will have the leading role in MAN OF LA MANCHA, to be presented by Center Players at the Jewish Community Center March 24-April 3 . . . he has two leading roles.

At the beginning he will play the part of Miguel Cervantes, the great Spanish novelist who wrote "Don Quixote," and then, under stress, he must transform himself, right on the stage in full view of the audience, into the character of Cervantes' classic hero, "Don Quixote."

He must not only achieve a make-up revision necessary in this scene with far greater rapidity than is required of an actor in his dressing room . . . everything has to be done on cue while he is carrying on a vivacious dialogue . . . but he must achieve an absolute precise make-up. The appearance of Don Quixote cannot be merely imaginary.

Dr. Middaugh is Assistant Professor of Music at Montevallo University and has appeared in many Birmingham Civic Opera presentations.

Frank Cruz and Deloras Myers also have principal roles in La Mancha.

Editor's Critique

S.G.A. Demands Reasonable

Craig Gravlee

Women's liberation is proving to be a popular topic among female writers on the Alabamian staff this year. Finally it seems that women have realized that they too are people—citizens who can demand equal rights in society and on the university campus. The separate regulations for men and women that have existed in many colleges across the country are beginning to change. On the U.M. campus women have just recently been granted more liberal dress and "sign out" regulations. Still most women believe that further change is not only needed but inevitable.

Just recently the Student Senate passed a bill that would allow women students to stay out an hour later each night of the week. Of course, this does not necessarily mean that the bill will become effective any time soon. The final verdict will come from a faculty committee and the president of the University.

But the Student Government has acted—and has acted responsibly. During a time when students have closed down over 200 other colleges, Montevallo students have continued to work through the system that their fellow students in other areas have abandoned. The S.G.A. at Montevallo has been responsive to the needs and wishes of the great majority of students, but for the system to work effectively both sides must be responsive to the changing attitudes in our society. This is especially true here at U.M. because the student demands are not radical, or unreasonable.

Religious Group Gets Funds Back

Craig Gravlee

The Student Religious Association is back in business. After being denied its funds by the Student Government Association's Executive Council last year, the S.R.A. was thought to be out of operation. University sponsored religion was temporarily dead at U.M. The $400 that once sat idle, or was spent on the entertainment of a small handful of students was now free to disburse on more popular S.G.A. functions. The Social Fund could have used the money to the benefit of all the students, or the Tower might have had enough money to cover the cost of its printing.

But the S.R.A. got its money back—all its money back, even after its president announced in an address to the Student Senate last year that about half the previously allocated amount would be sufficient to cover her expenses. But someone in Palmer came up with the cash even after it was voted down by the Student Government. It is surprising that the tuition paid by students, and the funds granted Montevallo by the great state of Alabama are so great that there is enough to support this miniature band of evangelists.

The Foibles Of Green Liquid And The Madison Ave. Gang

Becky White

In the intermedia of a television program a white dove comes swooping through a window and magically turns into a bottle of dishwashing liquid while three women at a beauty shop croon over a woman's hand immersed in a vile green liquid and a tiger converses with a youngster about his breakfast cereal.

If you have never heard of these dramatic incidents, it means only that you are not an addict of television and thus have been spared severe assaults on your intelligence. On the other hand, you may see commercials and never find anything wrong with them, may conceive them as brilliantly witty, as they often are, and a necessity for the support the massive television system as a free service.

So what is really wrong with commercials? Are not some of them rib-tickling funny? Don't they introduce new products and tell you which is best? Doesn't it support the competitive American system? Don't they provide an interruption in continual programming, furnishing a snack break for a beer or sandwich?

Certainly commercials do all this but don't they also stereotype individuals, breed discontent and envy of what is not obtainable and and in the devaluation of language? Advertising, with its constant use of superlatives, has succeeded in devaluing language to a point where it is a generally accepted axiom that most of the words seen displayed on billboards or in the colored pages of magazines, are as meaningless as the jingle of television commercials.

Daytime commercials aimed at women are beamed at them by a soft, gentle and seductive male voice. It is male because it is aimed at all the housewives at home all day with the cooking, ironing and cleaning. Commercials reinforce the assumption that women's only valid purpose is of wife and mother and servant of man; the inevitable sequel to her earlier function as sex object.

The Women's Liberation Movement shows an indignation for this propaganda as these women recognize that this is an archaic and demeaning concept and they are urging women to grow into individual human beings with a wide option of lives to live while conversely the sellers of the nation are bent upon reinforcing the old pattern. By beaming their message to the poorer purchaser they have her justify her position as a housewife.

Why do promoters coincide their products with the sell-out of human dreams and dignity? Why do they confront us with dolts and narcissists? How do they know so much about quirks and ailments and so little about real needs? Do these promoters not relize the power they have in forming attitudes and manners or must they address themselves only to the lowest common denominator of human dignity?

Commercials also reduce the attention span of a people whose concentration is already so fragmented. In an average daytime television serial there may be as many as 10 commercials in thirty minutes. Advertising is also heavy during the evenings; there is something obscene about a laxative commercial coming between a death count of soldiers in Vietnam and a death count of the victims of the latest airplane crash.

Enormous amounts of time, talent and money go into commercials but these advertisers must realize their potential power as social influencers and strive not only to entertain while selling their wares but must undertake to enlarge the public consciousness and human statue. Americans

THE SACRED CROOK

CROOK WEEK

Crook Week was initiated in the 1920's shortly after the school became a four-year college. At that time, there was a marked difference between the privileges of the various classes . . . The transition from a "lowly junior" to an "exalted senior" was very marked in the minds of the students themselves. Crook Week was "thought up" by some of the seniors and young faculty women as a kind of initiation or induction into the senior class. It was a kind of hazing, or "hell week," used when "juniors reached the point in their college careers when it seemed fitting to assume the weighty role of seniors." To do so, they must find the crook.

The crook is a limb of a tree. Reportedly, the mother tree was a cherry. It looks as if it had been "yanked" from any convenient tree or taken from a brush pile. When students, after hearing about the crook and the importance of finding it, finally see it, their reaction is almost invariably, "is that the crook?" Actually the senior who chose it had a carpenter cut it from a tree and strip it of foliage. In recent years it has been given a coat of varnish and, in spite of numerous attempts to steal it . . . the crook remains a treasured relic of the college, honored with a glass case and housed normally in Tutwiler Hall, the senior women's residence Hall. It is to be stored in the museum when the college acquires one.*

*This account of Crook Week was taken, with permission, from Alabama College 1896-1969. Several other items of reference were also to be found in this book that were taken from Alabama College 1896-1969. We wish to thank Dr. Lucille Griffith, the author, for permission to use her book as a reference for the Montage 1971.

Dr. S. M. Mahan, Jr.

In Conclusion

In conclusion of the work on this year's Montage, I wish to express my appreciation to all those who have helped in any way toward its completion:

To the Photo Lab Staff, Chuck King, John Waller, and Ron Albright for their expert help in the taking and printing of a large number of the pictures for this year's Montage.

To Mr. Spicer, who also contributed some of the photo work to the Montage.

To Dr. Lucille Griffith, for the use of a large number of references from her book, Alabama College, 1896-1969.

To Mr. Lee Barclay, for allowing me to add several things which were not included in our yearly budget.

To all the members of the Publications Committee for help in ways too numerous to mention.

And finally to Mr. Roger Powell, who made it possible for me to obtain this coveted position.

Sincerely,
Donald M. Rhodes
